TEACHING EXPERIENCE

Courses Taught as an Assistant Professor at Kansas State University

- Introduction to Agricultural Communication (AGCOM 110) F '22, F'23
This course is an introduction to agricultural communications programs, activities, technologies, careers, skills and trends.
- Special Topics in Agricultural Communications (AGCOM 420) SP '23
Supervise undergraduate students as they complete independent study projects.
- Undergraduate Research in Agricultural Communications (AGCOM 425) SP '23
This course uses qualitative, quantitative or mixed methods to conduct an agricultural and environmental communications research project. With support of the instructor, students will conduct a research project and report its outcomes.
- Video Production in Agriculture and Food (AGCOM 435) SP '23, '24
Theory of visual storytelling is combined with basic and intermediate video camera and non-linear editing instruction to produce TV documentaries, magazine-type stories, and personal videos for web and broadcast distribution.
- New Media Technologies (AGCOM 590) F '22, '23
This course focuses on the study and application of emerging new media technologies to effectively communicate information, and market products and programs to general and targeted audiences.
- Crisis Communication (AGCOM 610) SP '23, '24
Focus is placed on the application of effective crisis communication practices and techniques. Students will learn relevant interpersonal and organizational communication theory, assess/evaluate organizational risks and develop strategies to respond to crisis.

Courses Co-Taught as a Graduate Assistant at the University of Florida

Podcasting to Increase Science Literacy (AEC 4036/5037/6932) SP '21, '22
Provides directed experience in the following areas of agricultural communication: video production, graphic design, visual composition, desktop publishing, and multimedia development.

Courses Supported as a Graduate Assistant at the University of Florida

The Communication Process in Agricultural and Life Sciences (AEC 4031) F '20, '21, SP '22
Survey of basic communication concepts, with a heavy emphasis on writing, as they apply to agriculture and natural resource industries.

Communication Practices in Agriculture and Natural Resources (AEC 4035) F '21
This course provides students the opportunity to master a variety of writing styles used in corporate and mass media settings. Emphasis is placed on mastery of writing skills.

Communication and Leadership Capstone Experience (AEC 4930) F '19, SP '20
Students create a communications campaign and professional materials that integrates content and skills that communication and leadership development students have learned in their prerequisite courses.

Research and Business Writing in Agricultural and Life Sciences (AEC 3033) F '19
Establishes the importance of effective communication to success in both the educational and professional environments; emphasizes writing as a primary form of communication; examines the elements of effective written communication in organizational and scholarly areas; and explores the causes of ineffective writing and ways to correct them.
